The Long Night of Museums on 24 August: Mysterious, Hidden and Wicked Under the Theme of BERLIN SECRETS

75 participating museums +++ 750 events from 6 pm to 2 am +++ Ticket prices remain the same at 18 and 12 euros +++ Programme online from 23 July +++ Pre-sale of saver tickets from 29 July +++

On 24 August, it's that time of the year again: 75 Berlin museums are inviting you all to the Long Night of Museums. This year, they'll be drawing attention to the hidden and the locked away, to the nearly lost and the wicked: paintings will be turned upside down and examined closely, secret codes deciphered and finds from Berlin's undersurface put on display. On this night, doors will be opened to museum spaces that otherwise remain closed, to cellars and former hiding places, to air raid shelters and dark crypts.

One night, 750 events: visitors can follow Andy Warhol's self-interrogations as a drag queen in the Neue Nationalgalerie, marvel at the incredible methods used by secret services in the German Spy Museum, become privy to magical knowledge in the Neues Museum or listen to ghost stories that occurred once upon a time in the Prussian palaces of Charlottenburg. And that's just to mention a few of the treats on offer.

Then as the night gets darker...

Around midnight, visitors can look forward to a crescendo of special events. Highlights including a ghostly lecture held in the ruins of a lecture hall, murder-mystery readings by the "Murderous Sisters", a puppet theatre, a salsa party and a voguing ball will make this night by turns spooky, poetic and wild!

75 museums – 750 events – 1 ticket: the full programme is available from 23 July. Tickets are available from 29 July. Saver tickets for 12 euros (reduced price 10 euros) can be purchased until 11 August.
